There was written in the bracelet the initials E. P. P.

The next day Mary bought a paper, and under the heading of "Lost and Found" there was printed: "Lost on Main Street a gold bracelet with three diamonds in it. Written inside was the initials E. P. P. Return 4906 Main Street. Heavily rewarded."

Mary went home and got the bracelet, and after a short time found the place. She rang the doorbell, and a woman opened it. Mary asked for the lady of the house. The woman called her and a handsome lady came out all dressed in a lace dress. The lady told Mary her name was Emma Parmer Powers.

In this struggling life of toil, We are sometimes in despair, And the road that leads to the future Is filled with trouble and care.

There are sorrows and disappointments.
There are shattered hopes and strife,
Which arouse a feeling within us
To end this bitter life, contributions that appear on the page and parting them in a book to keep. I have lost my poem entitled "Hope," and I would appreciate it very much if you would print it again for me when it is convenient. We certainly are having some nice, cool weather after those warm days. Tuesday I went out to lakeside on the First Baptist Sunday School picnic, and it surely was pretty out there. I expect to go to Virginia Beach to the Haptist Summer Encampment in a few days. I know I shall have a nice time, as I always do when I am down there. I must close now, as my letter is becoming too long. Thanking you so much if you will print my poem, I am.

They expect to remain there for this week, and will return to Richmond next Monday.

Miss Carpenter Engaged.

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. B. F. Donovan, of Clifton Forge, was hostess at an announcement reception for her elster, Miss Louise Carpenter. Banks of rhododendron and ferns, rows of pink candles and tall baskets of Killarney roses were used in the decorations in the entire lower floor, and an orchestra played during the afternoon. Mrs. Donovan, in black lace over white, and with an armful of Killarney roses, was assisted in receiving by Miss Carpenter, who wore a gown of pink chiffon, with trimmings of pale blue and fon, with trimmings of pale blue and rhinestones, and held white roses. Mrs. J. C. Carpenter, Mrs. F. B. Keene, of Geneva, Switzerland, and Mrs. B. C. Goodwin also assisted in receiving the guests.

In the dining-room was a miniature lake, whose sides reflected overhanging mosses and ferns, and whose depths reflected, from the heart of a wedding bell of maindenhair fern and rhododendron, the secret of the engagement of Miss Carpenter and Dr. Robert Carlyle Cochrane, of Boston, whose marriage will take place October 7.

Numerous cupids were used in the decorations, for they swung from the chandellers, stood guard on the mantels, played on the banks of the lake, and one, who had been fishing, had caught two hearts on his hook. Cupids were in evidence everywhere, and they even perched on the tall glasses of frappe. The color scheme of pink and green was carried out in the refreshments. Mrs. George K. Anderson, Mrs. A. S. Brower, Mrs. L. J. Giles, Mrs. W. A. Haley, Mrs. Eugene Mathews, Mrs. W. C. Moody, Mrs. W. C. Wysor, Mrs. W. K. Smith, Mrs. Ringo, Mrs. O. B. Harvey assisted Mrs. Donovan in entertaining, and Mrs. E. Those who assisted in serving were Misses Uva Mathews, Eva Tatum, Bessie Williamson, Carric Tinsley, Susie Anderson, Fannje Haley, Emerin Keene, Carolyn Keene, Ruth Stout and Mary Anderson.

Miss Carpenter's wedding in October will be an occasion of much interest, not only in Virginia, but in Boston, where Dr. Cochrane is prominent in medical and social circles. Interesting Announcement.

Give Attractive Entertainment.

One of the most interesting functions of the past week for charity was the entertainment given by a number of little girls and boys for the lee Mission on Friday afternoon. The affair took place in the yard of Mrs. G. E. Vanderslice, 1923 Hanover Avenue, and was a series of charming one-act plays, staged and rendered by the children before a large and enthusiastic audience, after which refreshments were served. Those giving the entertainment included Anne Gunn, Alice Tyler, Virginia, Anne and Granberry Vanderslice, Alice and Grace Renne and Beverly Williams.
